

6TH ANNUAL COMMUNICABLE DISEASE CONFERENCE

STRONG FOUNDATIONS FOR FLEXIBLE RESPONSE

Wednesday – Friday
April 29 – May 1, 2015

Sheraton Downtown Raleigh
421 S. Salisbury St.
Raleigh, NC 27601

Target Audience

Physicians, Physician Assistants, Nurses, Nurse Practitioners and Medical Directors who work with communicable disease

Conference Description

This conference provides an opportunity to share best practice for communicable disease investigations of public health significance. The availability of state subject matter experts to dialogue with local partners fosters professional development and improves surveillance and investigation. The content of this training is intended to partially satisfy requirements for both Local Health Department Accreditation and selected Agreement Addenda.

Learning Objectives

At the end of this program, participants will be able to:

- Describe lessons learned from working in countries affected by Ebola.
- Identify the most common vector borne disease surveillance components and new emerging vectorborne diseases.
- Explain cultural sensitivity as it relates to different populations within North Carolina.
- Review interpretation of lab results, surveillance data and outbreak response related to foodborne diseases.
- Discuss new rabies guidance documents and partnership strategies for effective local rabies control programs.
- Describe the current guidelines for managing pertussis.
- Apply current guidelines in the evaluation of clients seeking care for STD/STI.
- Recognize the context for Practice Management in Local Health Departments.
- Utilize tools of epidemiology to publish and share findings from outbreak investigations in poster sessions.
- Practice skills acquired through training using case study and outbreak investigation tabletop exercise.
